West Central Conservancy District has begun the design and construction process for a low-pressure sanitary sewer in the Price Suburban Heights subdivision. The District has designed and installed several low-pressure systems in the past to help the Freeholders of the District. The Price Suburban Heights project will be the biggest to date.

A low-pressure system is unique by design and has proven to be tremendously useful to bring sanitary sewers to unsewered areas of the District. It allows a homeowner that is currently on a septic system the option of hooking to the District sewers. It also can be done with minimal disturbance to property due to the fact it is drilled and not open cut ditch installation.

The homeowner will be responsible for the installation of the grinder station and line set to the road; the District has specs for the grinder station that must be used. The specs are to assure the homeowner and District of quality equipment and material being used. The District has a list of preferred contractors to choose from for installations. If a homeowner is currently on septic and lives in a neighborhood that has a low pressure or gravity system and would like information on hooking to sanitary sewer, you can inquire by calling our office or going to our website. The District has some options to help with SDC (System Development Charge) fees, you can choose to pay them in full at time of application or payments can be made over a 5-year period.

There are currently several more areas the district is looking at that have requested help with sanitary sewers, Jeto Lake, Indian Head Lake and Sheffield Park neighborhoods. The West Central Conservancy District will not require a homeowner to hook on to sanitary sewer. It is the intention of the District to help those homeowners who are currently needing sewer availability. As always, the District is continually looking for ways to improve our infrastructure to help our Freeholders with their needs.
